A Systematic Review of Knowledge Tracing and Large Language Models in Education: Opportunities, Issues, and Future Research

Authors: Yongwan Cho, Rabia Embamed AlMamlook and Tasnim Gharaibeh

- Served as lead author on a systematic review of 67 research papers, examining how LLMs can enhance educational applications and address limitations in existing KT models.
- Explored LLM customization techniques such as in-context learning and agent-based approaches to handle complex and imbalanced educational data.
- Found that LLMs can improve the performance of KT models and address issues like cold-start problems through generating relevant features from question data.
- Identified limitations in existing LLMs and KT models, including reliance on structured and limited datasets, which restrict their ability to unlock deeper insights into learners and support broader educational applications

“Knowledge Tracing Meets Large Language Models”
